

Happy

1. Suppose you went hiking with your family and had fun.

You tell your friend:

I had a great time hiking with my family and dog recently!

Do you like nature?

2. Suppose you were so happy last the weekend because you went to the beach.

You tell your friend:

I was so happy last weekend.

3. Suppose you finally got a job as a teacher in high school after 4 months of going on interviews.

You tell your friend:

I have been going on interviews for 4 months and today I finally got a job!

4. Suppose your dad surprised you with your first car and it's an SUV. You are really happy

You tell your friend:

I got really joyful when my dad got me my first vehicle!

5. Suppose you are going to visit your grandmother today.

You tell your friend:

I am going to visit my grandmother today.

Sad

1. Suppose your best friend moved away because of his parents job, you're not happy. You plan to visit him as long as you have time.

You tell your friend:

My best friend moved away. He may never come back.

2. Suppose your dog passed away and you cried. You want to know how to overcome this sadness.

You tell your friend:

My dog passed away and his is my best friend.

3. Suppose you just got fired from my job because you made a mistake.

You was late for work on an important day.

You are going to find a new job.

You tell your friend:

I got fired from my job. I was so sad.

4. Suppose you had to leave home for college. You really miss your pets.
However, you tried to adjust your mood to face a new life.
You tell your friend:
I had to leave home for college and I really miss my home.
5. Suppose you failed to apply CMU which is famous for its computer science.
And you don't know why you fail.
You tell your friend:
I didn't get into my first choice school.

Angry

1. Suppose your neighbors are still making noise every night at midnight.
You will complain to them if they do it again tonight.
You tell your friend:
I'm so angry that my neighbors are making loud noise every night at midnight.
2. Suppose you failed at school and got really mad.
You think you try to study hard, but you are not smart.
You tell your friend:
I get mad when I fail at school.
3. Suppose you lost your dog and got mad.
You tried to contacted animal protection organization for help.
You tell your friend:
I'm really mad that I lost my dog.
4. Suppose your cat vomited on your favorite shoes.
You tried to clean your shoes up.
You tell your friend:
I was so angry that my cat vomited on my favorite shoes yesterday.
5. Suppose you were cheated by your best friend.
Your best friend lied to you about his grades.
You tell your friend:
I'm so angry that I got cheated by my best friend last night. I can't believe it.

Scared

1. Suppose there was some weird bumping noises in your house last night.
And you were alone in house.

You tell your friend:

There was some weird bumping noises in my house last night. I'm so scared.

2. Suppose you found a snake in my boot this morning.

Thankfully, your dog found the snake and warned you.

You tell your friend:

I found a snake in my boot. I was so afraid that it would bite me.

3. Suppose you have big fear of dogs because your brother was attacked when he was little.

You tell your friend:

I have big fear of dogs. I can't explain why.

4. Suppose you heard a knock at your door late at night.

It was your neighbor letting me know I left the garage open.

You tell your friend:

I was terrified when I heard a knock at my door late at night.

5. Suppose there was a big storm last night and you were so scared.

There was so much lightning and you were staying alone.

However, everything is fine al last.

You tell your friend:

There was a big storm last night. I was so scared.

Disgust

1. Suppose you noticed someone had thrown up in the Taxi backseat.

But you still took it since it was late, but I rode in the front seat.

You tell your friend:

I was getting in a Taxi and noticed someone had thrown up in the backseat.

2. Suppose you felt disgusted when you saw that people like to eat bugs.

You don't understand why they eat bugs.

You tell your friend:

I felt grossed out when I found out people eat bugs.

3. Suppose you ordered a hamburger from a restaurant and it was raw in the middle. You took it back and ask for refund.

You tell your friend:

Yesterday, I ordered a hamburger from a restaurant, and it was raw in the middle.

4. Suppose you went for a walk yesterday and stepped in some dog poop.

You had to clear it off but the smell is so disgusting.

You tell your friend:

I went for a walk yesterday and stepped in some dog poop. So gross!

5. Suppose you saw a mouse in a restaurant kitchen.

You tried to report it to the management.

You tell your friend:

I went to the worst restaurant ever today. I saw a mouse in the kitchen.

Surprised:

1. Suppose you were threw to a surprise party this year for my birthday.

You had no idea they were planning and even some of my relatives living overseas came to visit.

You tell your friend:

My family threw me an awesome surprise party for my birthday this year!

2. Suppose you won 100 dollars in the lottery. You were so shocked it happened because you never won a lottery before. You plan to buy a gift for your friends.

You tell your friend:

I won 100 dollars in the lottery.

3. Suppose you couldn't believe how good you did on your test.

You did well because of your hard work.

You tell your friend:

I was so surprised when I finally saw my grades.

4. Suppose you got an unexpected package today.

And it was your birthday gift from you brother.

You tell your friend:

I got an unexpected package today.

5. Suppose your friends put together a party for my graduation.

You had no idea it was even planned.

You tell your friend:

I have the best friends put together a party for my graduation.

Neutral:

1. Suppose you were asking your fiends something about homework.

You met some problem.

You tell your friend:

Hi, have you finished the homework?

2. Suppose you were asking your fiends weekend plan.

You are planning to watch movies.

You tell your friend:

What's your weekend plan?

3. Suppose you were asking your fiends something about coming exam.

It's challenging for you to review.

You tell your friend:

The exam is coming up. Have you started preparing for the exams?

4. Suppose you were asking your fiends something about lunch.

You had salad for lunch today.

You tell your friend:

What did you bring for lunch today?

5. Suppose you have seen a movie lately.

The movie's name is The Truman Show. It's an old movie.

You tell your friend:

Have you seen a movie lately?